VILLA BELLE ÉPOQUE

Villa Belle Époque was built in the 1920s and recently refurbished to reflect its colonial origins.
Occupying a 1,300 m2 plot, the hotel is surrounded by lemon, mango, olive and guava trees, intermingled with centennial palms.
Also sprawling in the garden is the symbolic Acacia tree, after which Acacia Restaurant is named.

Recognized by the ancient Egyptians as the tree of life under which the first gods of Egypt were born, the Acacia tree was considered sacred for the numerous benefits it exuded. Products such as timber, were derived and used to build ships for transportation of merchandise, the flower used for medicinal preparations and the Acacia pod was employed to tan leather.
